Notes to markers

- Use the marking grids on the following pages.
- Marking should always begin from the lowest mark in each column and work upward.
- A 'best fit' judgement should be made in judging first in which box to place the response and then, within that box, which mark is appropriate.
- The lower mark within a box should be given if some the criteria have been met but not all.
- Note on extent:
Award 0 marks where the performance fails to meet the lowest criteria.
Award 0 marks for 20 words or fewer.
Award a maximum of 7 marks for responses of between 21 and 60 words.
You need not count the words unless you think there will be fewer than 60. In normal-sized handwriting 60 words will be approximately 8 lines.

17 Write a story about a day out. Your story must begin with one of the following quotes from the text extract.

- “Got your spade?”
- “Never again, never again ...”
- “Oh come on, come on ...”

You should consider:

- the viewpoint – 1st person, 3rd person
- the place – the sounds, sights and smells
- what your character(s) did, felt, said, wore
- any funny, interesting or memorable moments.

Content is wholly relevant and conveyed in a consistent style throughout which effectively sustains the reader's interest.. Features and conventions of the relevant genre, if appropriate, are successfully manipulated for effect throughout. Narrative viewpoint is well-established with a consistent style and effectively engages the reader's interest throughout. Characters are developed and effectively portrayed with the use of a distinctive voice sustained throughout.		The response is well-organised and uses a wide range of organisational features to achieve an effective narrative. Events are logically sequenced throughout the text from an effective opening to a satisfying conclusion. Clear, well-organised paragraphs are used effectively to structure the narrative and control the pace of the story. An effective range of carefully chosen sentence openings and connectives are used to clarify or emphasise narrative detail.	Grammar is used accurately throughout the text. For example, there is: - a wide range of sentence types manipulated and/or adapted for effect. - grammatical features are used effectively to contribute to the overall development of the text. - consistent use of formal and/or informal register to enhance and emphasise meaning according to context, purpose and audience. Punctuation is accurate: Use of a wide range of punctuation for effect

Content is relevant with imaginative detail and in a generally appropriate and consistent style, which mostly sustains the reader's interest. Main features and conventions of the relevant genre, if appropriate, are occasionally manipulated for effect. Narrative viewpoint is generally well-established with a consistent style and engages the reader's interest throughout. Characters are developed and well-portrayed with the use of a distinctive voice.	Material is wholly relevant using a specialised vocabulary mostly accurately for the genre. Conscious language choices are made, which shape the intended purpose and effect on the reader. Makes conscious use of linguistic and literary techniques to shape meaning and effect.	The overall response is well-organised and uses a good range of organisational features successfully. Events are logically sequenced throughout the text with a successful opening and closing. Clear, well-organised paragraphs are used successfully to structure the narrative and help the pace of the story. A range of sentence openings and connectives are used appropriately to clarify or emphasise narrative detail.	Grammar is mostly accurate throughout the text. e.g., • Use a range of sentence types, manipulated and/or adapted for effect. • Use grammatical features to contribute to the overall development of the text. • Formal and/or informal register is generally used appropriately according to context, purpose and audience. Punctuation is mostly accurate: • Use a range of punctuation for effect.	Spelling is nearly always correct throughout. (There may occasional be phonetically plausible attempts at complex words.) Correct spelling of complex polysyllabic words, e.g., intelligent, initiative, fundamentally, inferiority, paediatrician, accommodation

Creation of texts (Wc)	Vocabulary and language (Wv)	Structure of texts (Ws)	Grammar and punctuation (Wg)	Word structure (Ww) (spelling)
Content is mostly relevant using literary techniques appropriate to the genre. Main features of the genre, if appropriate, are evident. Narrative viewpoint is clear with evidence of a personal style which helps engage the reader's interest. Some characters are developed and portrayed with the use of a distinctive voice.	Material is mostly relevant using a specialised vocabulary accurately for the purpose / genre. Mostly conscious language choices are made, which shape the intended purpose and effect on the reader. Makes some use of linguistic and literary techniques to shape meaning and effect	The text is generally well-organised and attempts to use a range of organisational features to build up the narrative. Events are logically sequenced though there may be some inconsistencies Paragraphs are used to structure the narrative though not always consistently or appropriately. A range of connectives are used appropriately to link narrative detail.	Grammatical structures are generally accurate throughout the text, e.g., • Use of some range of sentence types to support the text type. • Some complex sentences may be attempted to create effect, such as using expanded verb phrases. • Some awareness of formal and/or informal register according to context, purpose and audience. Some range of punctuation: • commas, semi-colons, dashes and hyphens are used accurately to clarify meaning. • There may be evidence of comma splicing. Note: if punctuation is totally lacking and other descriptors met then give the lower mark here.	Spelling of common and less common words, including polysyllabic and compound words, is correct, e.g., accurate, present, evidence, making, possible, search
[2]	[2]	[2–3]	[2–3]	[2]

Creation of texts (Wc)	Vocabulary and language (Wv)	Structure of texts (Ws)	Grammar and punctuation (Wg)	Word structure (Ww) (spelling)
General features of the genre, if appropriate, may be present. Narrative viewpoint is not always consistent. Some attempt is made to engage the reader. Some elements of the genre can be seen; a maximum of 1 mark can be awarded if not the correct genre.	Some language choices are made, which shape the intended purpose and effect on the reader. Creates some effect by using a range of linguistic and literary techniques.	Some attempt to organise the overall text Some attempt to sequence relevant ideas logically in relation to the stimulus. Paragraphs / sections are evident with related points grouped together or linked by time sequence. Movement between paragraphs or sections, may be disjointed with a limited range of sentence openings and connective.	Basic grammatical structures are generally correct, e.g., • subject and verb generally agree. Past and present tense of verbs generally consistent. • A mix of simple and some compound sentences used accurately. Some complex sentences may be attempted to expand detail but not always successfully. • Formal and/or informal register may be attempted but not consistently according to context, purpose and audience. Punctuation: • Demarcation of straightforward sentences is usually correct. • Commas are used in lists and occasionally to mark clauses. Note: learners should gain marks for good English with punctuation errors rather than lose marks for essentially good English.	Spelling of common words is correct, e.g., their/there, friend, another, around, because, anything, something.
